Skyline: 'The different ways of coping with tragedy can tear families apart. Will that be the fate of this family?'

Synopsis: Losing a husband and father can devastate any family. But this husband and father was a diver who one day did not resurface. Why? And how to cope with a death without reason or body, farewell or closure? As Merel and her children struggle, first with shock and sorrow, then to pick up the pieces and rebuild their shattered lives, such questions demand answers.

Now divisions within the family - as the kids seek hard truths while mum glides between emotional avoidance and dabblings with the supernatural - threaten to worsen the terrible situation. Merel plans to sell the home, with its daily reminder of what the ocean stole, but don't her children deserve a say?

Skyline: 'Be careful what you wish! With a third of our lives spent asleep, a boy seeks the holy grail of cost-free insomnia.'

Synopsis: Luca lives every moment for fun and thrills; his life one endless round of discos, social media chats, TV, video games and betting. How could he possibly find the time to play the piano, to study, to help his father every once in a while? But now this boy has stumbled on a truth that shocks him to the core of his being. In a life of 80 years, a full 27 of them will be spent asleep!

What, Luca now asks himself, if there was a way to avoid all that down time? What if he could find the secret of life without any need for sleep? What indeed? This pleasure-seeker may be about to learn the meaning of that famous Chinese curse - "may all your wishes be granted ..."

Skyline: “The play is cancelled due to Covid lockdown but it's July 14 and this is France. The show must go on!”

Synopsis: Every French citizen knows July 14 is Bastille Day. But this July 14 is ominously quiet. Yes, aeroplanes bring colour and spectacle to the Parisian skies. But why these empty streets? Where are the happy crowds and pâtisseries? Where the jugglers, wrestlers and clowns?

It's 2020, with lockdown in full force. At the Marigny Theatre the cast is told their play - inspired by Proust, no less - will not go ahead. So why does the director ask them to continue rehearsing? For the love they have for their art, of course! And for fraternity and fellowship. They are French, n'est pas? Why let a mere pandemic halt a 3 day, fabulously Gallic homage to life? Vive la France!

Skyline: 'Alberte's new assistant robot has made her the talk of the town - but how much of this is for real?'

Synopsis: Imagine a world without the problems which haunt ours. No climate crisis, poverty or war. Wouldn't that be great? Er, not for 12-year-old Alberte.

In her utopia, such problems have been solved by science and technology, but life still sucks! Everyone has a robot as personal assistant, but the teddy bear android which had delighted her as a little girl has become an embarrassment she's outgrown. For her 12th birthday, however, Alberte has been given Konrad, the last word in robot cool, who acts like a real person. All the kids want to hang out with her but how real is all this? And can the connection she has with Konrad truly compare to a human friendship?

Skyline: 'Ice-cream murder, black bananas and weird stunts in a laundromat? Patagonian's cop-philosophers must investigate!'

Synopsis: Don Pipo had been an ice cream maker of rare and extraordinary talent. The ices of this much loved and respected citizen of a sleepy town in Patagonia were legendary. So why on earth has someone seen fit to murder him? This is a question to which the local police must find a convincing answer, even as they conduct a simultaneous inquiry into the mysterious case of the Black Bananas. Neither investigation, it should be noted, is helped by the antics of two bored young men, bent on sowing mischief in a laundromat! Fortunately, these are not run of the mill cops but true-born philosophers who do know a thing or two about parallel universes

Skyline: 'Seeking meaning and purpose, a retired doctor volunteers for refugee work but it's not at all what she expected.'

Synopsis: Marisa, having retired from a fulfilling career as a doctor of medicine, is finding life after work dull and meaningless. She volunteers for work with child refugees at a Greece based NGO. But once there, she finds her new bosses - full of themselves and suffering from an acute but self-serving 'saviour complex' - are control freaks. Marisa must not, they tell her, hug any child or breach protocol by adapting to the needs of those she is supposedly there to help. So when she forges a friendship with Ahmed - in trauma after the disappearance of his parents - she is thrown into conflict not only with a heartlessly bureaucratic order, but with her own being.

Skyline: 'Her son is facing trial for his life and begs her to find evidence that will save him. But is he truly innocent?'

Synopsis: It's her worst nightmare come true. Fereshte's son, Arash, sits in a prison cell awaiting trial for the capital murder of his fiancée, Lida. A guilty verdict will send him to the gallows but Arash protests his innocence and begs his mother to help save his life. Is there anything she would not do to avert so cruel a fate for one she had brought into the world?

With the help of Arash's lawyer, and his friend Behrouz Sajedi, Fereshte seeks evidence that will exonerate her son. But as she investigates the circumstances of Lida's death, Arash's story begins to fall apart as Fereshte finds herself confronted with a choice no mother should ever have to make ...
